LOCAL LAWYER TAKES ON LEADING ROLE

Edinburgh lawyer Fred Tyler has been voted onto the national executive committee of the Association of Personal Injury Lawyers (APIL).

Fred, who is based at local firm Balfour and Manson, will act as APIL's representative for Scotland.

"I am absolutely delighted that I have been voted onto the committee and hope to make a valuable contribution to APIL both nationally and here in Scotland," said Fred.

A senior litigation partner at his firm, Fred is no stranger to high-profile roles. He is solicitor to Edinburgh Headway and a member of the Coulsfield Committee, set up by the Lord President of the Court of Session in Scotland to look at reform for personal injury procedure.

Fred lives in Edinburgh with his wife and two teenage daughters.
