Preparing for trial can be daunting!!

Over the years, trial bundles have been criticised by the courts from broken lever arch files, for the documentation included, and most recently in the prorogation of parliament appeals, we saw counsel having to add numbering to each of his pages where his paginated copy of the bundle did not match the others!

Whilst a beautifully prepared bundle will not win a bad case, a poorly prepared bundle can damage a good case.

Therefore getting bundles right is an important step in the preparation for trial!

Join Amey Welch for a step by step discussion based on the tips she put together for herself, which she felt would have been helpful to have to hand, at the time.

Technical requirements

You will need access to the internet on your PC, plus audio speakers. If you do not have access to speakers you will be able to receive audio via a phone line. Further information on how to log on to the webinar will be sent via email a week before the event.

Amey Welch is a senior litigator of APIL. She is a solicitor within Irwin Mitchell's serious injury team in London. She has several years' experience in personal injury law having worked within the industry since 2008. She qualified as a chartered legal executive in January 2015 before cross-qualifying as a solicitor in 2018.

Amey specialises in complex and serious injury claims involving polytrauma and brain injury. She also has experience in representing family members who have lost loved ones as the result of an accident.

She is passionate about building strong client relationships and understands the importance of early rehabilitation in order to achieve not only the best outcomes for clients financially but also in terms of their rehabilitation. Amey believes that being a good personal injury lawyer is not only about knowing the law but rather it is to have empathy, compassion and the ability to gain a person's trust in their hour of need.

Amey spent 10 years juggling a commute, legal career, studies and family life. Now that her studies are complete, she is keen to invest time in encouraging junior members of the profession to share their knowledge and experiences with each other in order to develop their learning and skills. She is also keen to promote wellbeing within the profession.
